BHUBANESWAR: The Centre will set up a National Institute of Science, Education and Research (NISER) here aiming to remove the regional imbalance in science teaching and development of science and technology in the country.

Prime Minister Manmohan Singh said the NISER would facilitate the synergy between research and higher education and would be at par with the Indian Institute of Science, Education and Research (IISER) being established at other places.

The NISER, which would operate under the umbrella of the Department of Atomic Energy (DAE), would undertake integrated five year masters courses in core and emerging branches of science to provide world class education to students after the 10+2 stage, he said while addressing a meeting at the Institute of Physics here.

Singh said the NISER would work within the DAE family and award degrees under the Homi Bhabha National Institute (HBNI) which already is a deemed university for post-graduate studies.

"There was a time when the East was at the forefront in science teaching and development of science and technology. Today, the East is lagging behind the South and the West. We need to redress this regional imbalance by setting up the NISER," he said.
